

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 18
Issue 1 Winter

Article 6

1988

Una Vecchia

Zona Teti

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Teti, Zona. "Una Vecchia." The Iowa Review 18.1 (1988): 48-48. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3615>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Four Poems · Zona Teti

UNA VECCHIA

Leaves in wind and a sea-wind smell of salt and wet rot, loves of an old woman when the boys go away
to the mist of girls.

So I too was mist
melting back into a mountain, leaving at last clarity and stone.

But boys want to start to drown,
though most make sure they never finish,
asking mist to part to a sea,
asking death to stay a possibility.

Age is too far out to see.
Or rather, the symbols of age.
The boys still go by codes
as if they knocked rhythmically still on the clubhouse door.

And yet the boys are lovely and new.
You can't help thinking about them.
The new skin in mist. The oversized hands.
The new minds that die with a thought.